(Olivares-m/Neeki-s) The 3/20/2025 meeting minutes were approved by unanimous consent.

5. Public Speakers

Members of the public may address Governance Committee members on any item appearing on this posted agenda or matters impacting students.

6. Reports

a. Chair

Chair Rubio shared a heartfelt message during the final Governance meeting of the semester, noting that for many, it would be their last ever. He expressed gratitude to fellow Committee members for their thoughtful participation, especially in asking meaningful questions, which he felt reflected their genuine care for students. He concluded by thanking everyone.

b. Student Government Coordinator

Hesgard began by acknowledging the bittersweet nature of the last governance meeting of the semester, noting that for many, it would be the last meeting ever. She expressed her appreciation for the committee's engagement, particularly highlighting the insightful questions asked, which demonstrated the group's commitment to the students.

She then provided several updates:

1. Regarding ASI Scholarships, Hesgard reminded everyone that the grading window for applications was closing at 11:59 PM that day. She mentioned that she had already sent reminders to those who had not completed the grading yet and emphasized the importance of finishing it, as the selection process and updates to students' financial aid packages could not proceed without it
2. For Reimbursement Submissions, she informed the members that anyone who was involved in a club or organization that had received ASI funding (including ICS, Executive Senate, ICA, or contingency requests) should submit their reimbursement information by May 9th.

She also informed everyone that the Love Fullerton community service event would take place on April 26th, as part of Earth Week, and students could contact Susie or Coulson for more information. Spring Community Chat would be held on April 29th from 12 PM to 1 PM at the Grand Staircase, where a panel would answer students' questions, both in person and virtually through live-streaming. Hesgard reminded everyone about the ASI Banquet on May 2nd, where members would be celebrated with awards and recognition. She noted the RSVP deadline had passed, and those who had not yet done so should contact Shauna as soon as possible.

Finally, she mentioned that the Spring Concert would be held on May 3rd, and though the event was sold out, more information would be available on Instagram.

7. Time Certain

a. Discussion: Amendments to the Policy Concerning ASI Scholarships

The Committee will discuss amendments to the Policy Concerning ASI Scholarships.

GOV 010 24/25 (Walkley-m/Olivares-s) A motion was made and seconded to approve the resolution amending the Policy Concerning ASI Scholarships.

Susan Collins, the Assistant Director of Corporate Affairs, shared updates regarding the ASI scholarships. She began by discussing recent changes to the scholarship policy, which had been approved by the Board of Directors in 2023. These updates were based on reviews with the Scholarships Office and legal counsel. One of the key revisions involved streamlining the scholarship process by aligning it with the university's scholarship hub, making it easier for students to access opportunities. This coordination with the campus Scholarship Office would be effective by Spring 2026.

Another major change was that the Board would decide annually how much money to allocate for scholarships during the budget process, rather than setting specific dollar amounts for each scholarship. This flexibility was intended to reflect changing priorities, particularly in wellness and supporting students. The scholarship application, disbursement, and payment processes would be coordinated with the campus office, with the campus scholarship timeline running from January to March, and ASI would be included in the call for scholarships sent out by the campus.

Collins also outlined changes to the scholarship criteria. Enrollment requirements would be standardized: undergraduate and credential students would need to enroll in at least 12 units, while graduate students would need at least 6 units. The GPA requirements were also standardized, with undergraduates and credential students now required to have a 2.5 GPA, while graduate students would maintain the existing 3.0 GPA requirement.

In addition to these revisions, the scholarship opportunities were moved from the policy body to an appendix, making it easier to update and amend them. Collins highlighted a new scholarship opportunity being proposed: the Pathway to Success Scholarship. This scholarship would be available to all students, though it would be marketed to specific communities. It aimed to provide funding for special and unique communities without limiting eligibility to a protected class.

Finally, Collins outlined some prompts that would be used for students applying for this new scholarship, asking them to describe their background, community involvement, academic achievements, challenges they've overcome, and the resources they've found helpful in their educational journey.

Olivares expressed that out of the seven proposed scholarship prompts, they felt that questions one, six, and five were the strongest, with question one standing out the most. They emphasized that question one, in particular, could provide an opportunity for students especially those from populations affected by the removal of two other scholarships to share their identities and explain how their background has shaped them.

Walkley echoed Olivares' sentiments, agreeing that questions one, five, and six were particularly strong. They mentioned having just completed their scholarship grading, making them familiar with the types of questions typically asked. Walkley noted that while some of the other proposed prompts touched on topics already covered in other scholarships or application sections, questions one, five, and six offered a valuable opportunity to understand the students' motivations the "why" behind their stories which they felt was especially meaningful.

Collins discussed the importance of engaging the campus community to ensure students are aware of the new scholarship opportunities. She emphasized the need to reach out to various centers on campus, including those for international students, and to collaborate with the Scholarships Office for promotion. Collins stressed the importance of sharing this opportunity with all students, regardless of whether they are international or domestic, and ensuring that the messaging highlights the scholarships' role in supporting students' financial and emotional wellness. She highlighted ASI's commitment to supporting students' overall well-being through co-curricular opportunities, aiming to provide resources to as many students as possible. Collins acknowledged that while not every student could receive a scholarship, they aimed to make the process valuable and appreciated by the student body. She encouraged feedback on how to further engage students in the application process.

Chair Rubio opened the floor to questions:

Megan Hannoun appreciated the scholarship prompts because they would be difficult to answer using AI, which encourages students to share personal experiences. Susan agreed, noting that some applicants had simply copied and pasted their responses, which didn't provide meaningful insight. She emphasized that the prompts allowed students to showcase their character and individuality rather than just listing achievements. Susan added that the goal was for students to tell their authentic stories—while they might use AI to polish their writing, the content should be genuinely theirs. She confirmed that prompts one, five, and six would be recommended moving forward.

Nebedum asked for clarification on whether the new scholarship was meant to replace the two that were previously removed and if it would still be marketed in the same way. Collins responded that, to some extent, the new scholarship would fulfill that purpose, but its main goal was to open up the scholarship opportunities to a broader range of students. Unlike the previous scholarships, which were more specific, the "Pathway to Success" scholarship is designed to be more inclusive, welcoming all students without targeting a specific group. As for the number of scholarships to be offered, it would depend on the available budget, which would be allocated accordingly.

Walkley asked if all the scholarships would have the same amount, such as offering two scholarships worth $500 each. Susan Collins responded that, hypothetically, they would not all have the same amount. Referring to the original policy, she explained that each scholarship typically had one offering, except for certain groups like international students and graduate students, who had more. However, last year, when additional funding was allocated to scholarships, the number of scholarships increased significantly, with some having as many as 6 or even 14 scholarships. The allocation of scholarships would depend on the budget provided by the board, and they would aim to make the distribution as inclusive and equitable as possible. The Committee suggested that outreach to the ICCs, Housing, Cultural Centers, The Pantry, Basic Needs, centers that serve non-traditional centers would help to increase student engagement.

Rubio opened the floor to discussion:

Hannoun recommended reaching out to Long Beach's ASI, which had faced a similar situation regarding Undocumented and International student scholarships. They mentioned that Long Beach had managed to retain their scholarship by rebranding it slightly and suggested that this could be a useful model to consider adopting in the long term.

 (Walkley-m/Olivares-s) Roll Call Vote 5-0-0. The motion to approve the resolution to amend to the Policy Concerning ASI Scholarships was adopted.

10. Announcements/Member's Privilege

Walkley expressed gratitude to the chair and the committee, reflecting on their two years in ASI and saying Governance was their favorite part. They praised the group's growth and accomplishments, offered early congratulations to graduating members, and said they would miss everyone.

Chair Rubio expressed his gratitude to the Committee members for their hard work and teamwork throughout the year or more, acknowledging that many joined their roles uncertain but eager to contribute. He also celebrated the upcoming graduations for most members. Additionally, Rubio shared that two events would be held in housing that day, one of which involved the Rainbow and Linux communities, featuring a drag event Loteria. He encouraged everyone to attend, mentioning there would be free food, aguas frescas, and more. The event was set from 7:00 to 9:00 PM in the MPR in housing.

Nebedum shared that they would be attending the Nigerian Student Coalition conference over the weekend and expressed gratitude to ASI, particularly those involved in Finance, for supporting the event through funding. They emphasized the significance of the community to them personally and appreciated ASI recognizing its importance.

11. Adjournment

Chair Rubio adjourned the meeting at 3:07 pm.
