7. Time Certain

A. 1:30pm: Dr. Amir Dabirian, Provost/Vice President Academic Affairs

Chair Morales welcomes Dr. Amir Dabirian.

Dr. Dabirian shared enrollment updates, noting CSUF reached 45,165 students, the largest CSU, with growth driven by increased freshmen enrollment and higher unit loads. He reported changes to General Education under the new Cal-GETC framework, campus improvements including new and upgraded study spaces and success centers, and over 38,000 degree progress checks and 48,000 advising appointments completed. He also announced the launch of an AI advising agent to support students 24/7 and reaffirmed Academic Affairs' five goals: access, student well-being, faculty/staff recruitment, funding, and innovation.

Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Quock asked whether students would still need 120 units to graduate and, if so, what courses would replace the reduced GE requirements.

Dr. Dabirian confirmed the 120-unit minimum remained, with students able to fulfill the difference through electives, recommending they consult advisors. Dr. Jarvis added that the reduction in GE units generally allowed students more free electives, though the effect could vary depending on prior coursework. He emphasized that majors had not expanded unit requirements, and students should review their TDA to ensure they meet the 120-unit minimum (135 for BFA degrees).

- Jain asked who would be developing the AI advising agents and what is the current graduation rate.

Dr. Dabirian replied that no developers were being hired; instead, Titan GPT was used to build AI agents. Advisors were testing it to ensure accurate answers. He added the graduation rate was about 69% for six years and over 40% for four years.

- Romero asked if there were plans to give colleges more identity in the College Park building, noting Communications clubs were underrepresented.

Dr. Dabirian confirmed that plans were underway to create more spaces for colleges, clubs, and organizations. He explained the building was originally a business building (purchased in 1992) and lacked study and collaboration areas. With upcoming construction and a new bridge project, the space and landscaping would change. Efforts were being made to revamp the Student Success Center and first floor to improve representation and student spaces.

- Salguero asked how to address student concerns about AI's negative environmental impacts.

Dr. Dabirian acknowledged AI is energy-intensive, noting that generating a single AI image uses energy comparable to charging a phone once. He said companies are working to improve efficiency, such as smarter data center placement and cooling. He added that a new Center for AI and Academic Affairs, opening in November, would focus on ethical and environmental considerations of AI use.

- Ryals asked if students could have more control over the environmental impact of AI use.
Dr. Dabirian explained that Titan GPT runs under the university's Azure environment, giving them ethical and usage control. He noted that AI agents like Titan GPT have minimal environmental impact compared to energy-heavy tools like AI-generated images or videos.

Chair Morales opened the floor for discussion. There were no points of discussion.

B. 2:00pm: Dr. Eric Hanson, Dean Pollack Library

Chair Morales welcomed Dr. Eric Hanson.

Dr. Hanson provided updates on library initiatives. The accessible technology room was moved from the fourth floor to the first floor near the Genius Bar and Research Help Desk, improving access for students with mobility needs. The former DSS room was converted into the library's largest study room, and feedback is being sought on whether it should also be reservable for clubs. The free Scantron/Blue Book vending machine was replaced with open shelving to reduce confusion. He also announced the library's first annual report, now in final edits, which will highlight the scope of library services in both print and digital formats. In addition, concerns remain with archives and special collections, which need improved environmental controls. A concept plan with renderings is in progress to protect materials and create a more student-friendly space with a reading room and classroom.

Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Ryals asked how the library encourages students to engage with special collections beyond advertising.
Dr. Hanson explained that the library promotes collections through exhibits, such as a new campus activism display and a digital project called Dreaming in Metal. Librarians also work with faculty to integrate materials into classes and host events featuring archival items, like last year's Donut Dollies presentation. He noted the need to make spaces more welcoming, as parts of the third floor currently feel uninviting, and renovations aim to improve that ??

Chair Morales opened the floor for discussion.

- Syed praised the digital student activism exhibit and suggested reserving the new large study room as club space, noting that TSU often gets double-booked. She also recommended more collaboration and signage with the Center for Oral History on the sixth floor, since many students outside the History Department don't know about it.
- Dr. Hanson agreed to advocate for increased publicity and collaboration, though the center is managed by the History Department.
- Quock supported Syed's idea of using the new study room for clubs and asked about occupancy.
Dr. Hanson replied that it could fit 15–20 people and would be reservable, possibly with dedicated club times.
- Suzer suggested that the new library space would be ideal for club events, since finding venues is often difficult. She suggested reserving it for clubs during set times (e.g., 12–2) and promoting it in library ads.
Dr. Hanson thanked her and said the room is open for use now, and clubs can email to reserve it until the system is finalized.

C. 2:15pm: Arboretum, Gregory Pongetti, Special Collections Curator

Chair Morales welcomed Gregory Pongetti, Arboretum.

Pongetti shared that the Arboretum, a self-supporting program, had relied on facility rentals, plant sales, donations, and ASI-supported student positions for operations. This year, they updated interpretive signage for self-guided tours and prepared to reopen the Heritage House with redesigned tours for both public visitors and school groups. Harvested produce was partly donated to the ASI food pantry, and compost was returned to garden beds. Student involvement continued through the E3 program, including a new early childhood engagement team and projects focused on interactive displays and improving the pump filtration system. Flower fields bloomed, drawing public engagement through “pick-your-own” bouquet events, and a sustainability course investigated soil chemistry. The director position remained open, with interviews underway.

Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Guzman asked about making plant sales more accessible to students by hosting them closer to campus, like at the quad or library.

Pongetti replied that while bringing the full inventory would be difficult, they could offer a small selection of plants, fruit, and flower bouquets at such events.

Chair Morales opened the floor for discussion.

- Romero praised the Arboretum as a “hidden jewel” of CSUF and expressed interest in collaborating, especially with the COM 474 class and their farmers market, to give the Arboretum more attention and opportunities.

Pongetti responded positively.

- Komiya praised the Arboretum’s reach and suggested promoting seasonal items more heavily, including plants and fruits, and increasing on-campus visibility through posters and events.

Pongetti agreed, noting that plant sales are timed to align with seasonal growth, such as California native plants in the fall and vegetable sales in the spring.

- Suzer praised the Arboretum as a relaxing campus space and suggested hosting a seasonal farmers market to showcase plants and flower-picking activities, making them more accessible to students.

Pongetti agreed and said he would connect her with the person in charge of the Farmer’s Market.

- Jain suggested keeping the Arboretum open later so students could unwind after classes.

Pongetti explained it normally closes at 4 p.m. due to staff schedules, but evening openings have been done before for events like summer strolls and “You Pick Flower” activities, which students can attend.

A. Action: Resolution to Appoint Audit Committee Member and Chair (Morales)

The Board will consider approving a resolution to appoint a Student Director to serve on the ASI Audit Committee and appoint a member of the Committee to serve as Chair effective immediately through May 31, 2025.

BOD 016 25/26 (Salazar-m/Romero-s) A motion was made and seconded to appoint Fall 2025 Audit Committee Member and Chair effective immediately through May 31, 2025.

Chair Morales announced a Board vacancy due to an elected student not meeting a CSU Chancellor's Office eligibility requirement. While the student's dedication was acknowledged, the position cannot be held, and the Board will follow standard procedures to fill it.

Chair Morales yielded to Dr. Dave Edwards.

Dr. Edwards explained that every nonprofit must have an Audit Committee to review financial reports, ensure proper handling of student fees, and verify internal controls. Five members serve on the Committee, assisted by staff. With one vacancy, the Board needed to elect a member to join the Committee for a likely single meeting next week and then select an Audit Committee chair.

Chair Morales opened the floor for nominations.

Ryals volunteered to serve in the vacant position on the Committee.

Chair Morales asked the existing Committee members for a volunteer to serve as Chair.

Salazar and Suzer volunteered to serve as Chair.

Chair Morales invited the candidates to talk about their interests.

Salazar expressed interest in becoming the next audit chair. He explained that initially, she was hesitant due to being new to ASI, but after gaining experience in the Audit Committee over the summer and the start of the year, he felt ready to take on the leadership role. He emphasized her commitment to working diligently with the Committee and confidence that whoever is elected will fulfill the position effectively.

Suzer spoke about her interest in the audit chair position, emphasizing her commitment to accountability, integrity, and transparency. She highlighted her experience as treasurer and financial officer for Eta Sigma Gamma, where she managed and tracked expenses, as well as her role as president of WIBS, overseeing operations and finances. She expressed her dedication to ensuring student funds are properly accounted for, especially with initiatives like the Wellness Initiative, and bringing careful financial oversight to ASI.

Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Quock asked Salazar what interested him about the Audit Committee based on the first meeting and what prior experience he could bring to the table.
Salazar said he had no prior Audit Committee experience but served on the Finance Committee, noting the close link between audit and finance. He explained that the role focused on collaboration with the Committee, advisors, management, and the auditor rather than number crunching, and expressed confidence in his ability to be an effective chair.
- Ahmad how Suzer would educate and train Audit Committee members with varying levels of financial expertise while ensuring all members were involved.
Suzer responded that she would focus on understanding each member's perspective, listening, and delegating tasks effectively. She noted that her experience wearing different hats and leading in her club would help her support and chair the Committee successfully.
- Valdez asked Suzer how she planned to manage her various leadership roles across other organizations, including ASI and CSI.
Suzer responded that she had managed multiple responsibilities during her freshman year while maintaining her GPA, emphasizing that the key was delegation and time management. She noted that serving on the Audit Committee was not a significant additional time commitment, as she was only active on two Committees and the role mainly involved chairing and collaborating with outside auditors.

Chair Morales opened the floor to discussion. There were no points of discussion.

Chair Morales asked if there were any objections to moving into a roll call vote. There was no objection.

10. Reports

A. College Reports

I. ARTS (Presenters: Joshua Lopez, Sarah Komiya)

Komiya and Lopez reported on enhancing the visual and performing arts experience at Cal State Fullerton. They focused on increasing collaboration between departments, addressing student concerns like classroom ventilation, art supply sharing, and practice room bookings, and improving graduation timelines. They also highlighted upcoming events, exhibitions, performances, and opportunities, including an overseas trip, while emphasizing accessibility for students and recent facility improvements. Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Salazar suggested including parking with ticket sales, allowing buyers to provide their license plate information online for coordination with parking services.
Lopez acknowledged the idea, noting it could work well for online ticket purchases but might be trickier for in-person sales, and said she would consider it and share it with the relevant team.
- Suzer commented on the parking situation, noting it hindered student engagement on campus and shared that she had been coordinating with the athletic department.
Lopez suggested collaborating with parking to allow free or reduced-fee parking during certain hours, using show tickets as proof, and asked about boosting student attendance at performances. Suzer explained that most attendees were local residents rather than students, highlighting an opportunity to increase student participation across arts events. Dr. Edwards added context, explaining that weekend and 24-hour parking fees were mandated to keep the self-sustaining parking program funded without relying on state tax dollars, and noted that initial warnings were being issued as the system was implemented, with further adjustments under consideration.

- Romero raised a concern about the Wacom pens, noting that their loss rendered the tablets unusable.
Komiya explained that the pens were expensive, around $100 each, and although thefts were not frequent, they occurred often enough to be notable. Romero emphasized the importance of ensuring students had consistent access to the tablets, highlighting that limited pen availability could cause significant inconvenience, even if it was not a budget issue.

Chair Morales opened the floor to questions.

- Montano asked about the progress on Supplemental Instruction (SI) for difficult courses.
Quock replied that he had discussed the issue with the dean previously and planned to follow up again, acknowledging that business courses can be challenging and that students need additional support.

Summary:

Hi everyone! Hope you all had a great week. Here is a list of the meetings I've attended. On Aug, 28 we had our first Finance committee meeting of the year. Here we learned our roles and responsibilities in this committee, as well as some terms and concepts we will need to know to prepare for the year. Over the last few weeks, I've been working with Dean Sundaram and Cintas to create an in-person recruiting event at Cintas's Anaheim location. We have a meeting this Thursday and I will have more updates for you all soon!
