6. Reports

A. Chair (Ahmad)

Chair Ahmad opened the meeting by welcoming everyone and noting the strong progress made in filling Board vacancies. She highlighted that candidates for all three positions would present today, encouraging members to stay engaged and ask thoughtful questions to ensure diverse representation. She also shared plans to schedule mid-semester one-on-one check-ins to track progress and offer support, thanking everyone for their time and collaboration.

B. Director of Student Government (Hesgard)

Chair Ahmad yielded to Rebecca Hesgard, ASI Director of Student Government. Hesgard gave a brief report, reminding everyone to continue promoting ASI scholarships, with the October 12 deadline and an extra $105,000 in funding this year. She noted that Board vacancy candidates would be selected today and thanked members for their time and recent one-on-one meetings. She also highlighted upcoming initiatives from the Environmental Sustainability, Lobby Corps, and Social Justice & Equity commissions.

9. New Business

A. Action: Resolution to appoint the Director for the College of Business and Economics (Ahmad)

The Committee will interview applicants and recommend a candidate to serve as the Director for the College of Business and Economics through May 31, 2026.

GOV 001 25/26 (Romero-m/Camarillo-s) A motion was made and seconded to approve the resolution to appoint the Director of the College of Business and Economics.

Chair Ahmad yielded to Rebecca Hesgard, ASI Director of Student Government.

Hesgard outlined that the first vacancy would be for the College of Business, followed by Education and the Colleges of Natural Science & Mathematics. Each candidate would have three minutes to present, followed by a one-minute Q&A. Members were asked to give their full attention, take notes, and keep their questions balanced and focused on the candidates' qualifications rather than their personal characteristics. A list of suggested questions was also provided to guide the discussion.

Akash Yarehalli Satish was invited to the podium.

Satish introduced himself as an Information Systems major with a focus on Business Analytics and shared his goal of becoming a data scientist. He highlighted 2.6 years of experience as a data analyst and his volunteer work in securing sponsorships for student events. He expressed interest in representing the College of Business and Economics, aligning with ASI's mission of advocacy and inclusion. He outlined his academic, leadership, and volunteer experience, emphasizing his strengths in communication, adaptability, and integrity. His vision focused on increasing student engagement, strengthening collaboration with faculty and leadership, expanding career and networking opportunities, and promoting equity and inclusion.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Morales asked Satish to share his involvement in communities and organizations and how those experiences shaped his goals for the role.
Satish explained that he was a Board member of the Data Club and Data Tech Club, where he organized data events and facilitated company collaborations for internships and networking. He also served on the Board of a business club, securing sponsorships and fostering partnerships with companies and vendors.
- Quock asked Satish about actionable steps to implement his vision as director.
Satish responded that his primary goal was to enhance student engagement by promoting active participation in events and fostering collaboration among students, faculty, and the Board.
- Romero asked Satish how he would use his experience to bridge the gap between ASI and students.
Satish suggested creating more engaging activities and using surveys beforehand to understand student interests, ensuring events are relevant and appealing to both students and ASI.

Cesar Mendoza was invited to the podium.

Mendoza, a Finance major and sophomore with a 4.0 GPA, highlighted his involvement as a BIC representative for Alpha, equity analyst for SMF, and VP of Finance for the Investment Banking Club, where he led events and training sessions. He also gained experience at Romero Wealth Management and Clara, a tech startup. His goals focused on improving career readiness through workshops and alumni talks, promoting student wellness initiatives, and strengthening student representation.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Morales asked Mendoza how his experience as a Governance Ambassador would influence his approach to the Board role.
Mendoza explained that although he recently started, his involvement in ASI has given him valuable insight into the organization and strengthened his interest in taking on greater responsibility.

- Romero asked Mendoza how he would represent all colleges despite his business focus.
Mendoza explained that his experience in Alpha exposed him to students from various majors, helping him understand and support underrepresented voices.
- Camarillo asked Mendoza to share a time he made a difficult decision.
Mendoza described how he identified a gap in his club's technical training, took the initiative to propose improvements, and balanced supporting members with his own recruiting prep through careful time management.
- Valdez asked how he would manage this role alongside his commitments and GPA.
Mendoza shared that he relies on Google Calendar and a daily agenda system to stay organized and plans to continue this approach to balance responsibilities effectively.

Brenda Lopez was invited to the podium.

Lopez introduced herself as a sophomore majoring in International Business and highlighted her extensive campus involvement and leadership background. In high school, she helped found the Student Body Council, initiated wellness activities, and served as class representative. At college, she has been actively involved in multiple business and leadership programs, and she lives on campus, which has given her a strong understanding of student life and available resources. She conducted a student survey revealing concerns about weak faculty connections, low awareness of campus resources, and a desire for more financial aid guidance and career opportunities. Her goals focused on increasing financial aid and awareness of resources, improving faculty–student connections, and advocating for student needs. She emphasized her strong campus engagement and student perspective as key strengths for the role.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Morales commended Lopez for using resources and gathering survey data, confirmed her role in founding her high school ASB, and asked how she'd reach more students beyond the initial eight responses.
Lopez explained that she's already collecting more responses and plans to use communication methods students actually engage with instead of flyers, while continuing to gather data for ASI meetings.
- Quock asked Lopez about her campus involvement and how she plans to use it to boost student engagement.
Lopez shared that she's part of the Scholars Leadership program, volunteers often, participates in public speaking, is involved in multiple business clubs, and actively attends nearly all campus events.
- Romero asked Lopez for a specific example of a community she's advocated for and seen tangible impact.
Lopez shared that during her first semester, she spoke up to a professor on behalf of her classmates in a Chicano studies class, as many students felt uncomfortable with how the class was being managed. She took the initiative to communicate their concerns directly to the professor.
- Chair Ahmad asked Lopez if she could commit to the required Tuesday/Thursday meeting times, given her many roles.
Lopez assured that she'll make space for this role, is committed to attending meetings, and will continue advocating for student voices regardless of the position.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion.

- Quock emphasized the importance of candidates' familiarity with ASI and prior campus leadership when filling a vacancy. He highlighted Mendoza for his strong involvement and leadership in multiple clubs, and Lopez for her familiarity with ASI, though he wanted more detail on her accomplishments.
- Morales commended all candidates, noting that Mendoza and Lopez stood out. He leaned toward Cesar, citing his alumni engagement plans, ASI knowledge, and strong networks through clubs and his college—qualities he felt aligned well with the role's needs.

The Committee moved to a roll call vote.

GOV 001 25/26 (Romero-m/Camarillo-s) Roll Call Vote: 0 Satish - 5 Mendoza - 0 Lopez. The resolution to appoint Cesar Mendoza as the Director of College of Business and Economics effective immediately through May 31, 2026 was adopted.

Motion moved by Luca Romero and motion seconded by Luisa Camarillo.

B. Action: Resolution to Appoint the Director for the College of Education (Ahmad)

The Committee will interview applicants and recommend a candidate to serve as the Director for the College of Education through May 31, 2026.

GOV 002 25/26 (Romero-m/Camarillo-s) A motion was made and seconded to approve the resolution to appoint the Director of the College of Education.

Chair Ahmad yielded the floor to Rebecca Hesgard, ASI Director of Student Government, who then introduced the candidates.

Angel Cruz Cardiel was invited to the podium.

Cardiel, a CSUF alumnus with a BFA in Art and a minor in Chicano Studies, is pursuing a Master's in Higher Education. Coming from a family of educators, he has worked with students from TK through higher ed. He has leadership experience as a resident advisor (winning the Social Justice Advocate Award), supporting LGBTQ+ students through the Rainbow House, working at the Titan Dreamers Resource Center, and serving underserved youth at the Boys and Girls Club. His goals are to increase awareness of campus resources, especially for non-traditional education students, to gain practical experience for his career, promote diversity and inclusion, and represent College of Education students to ensure their needs are met.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Camarillo asked Cardiel to share a difficult decision he's made. Cardiel explained that the Titan Dreamers Resource Center's peer mentorship program was delayed due to restructuring. This impacted both mentors and students, so he worked closely with mentors to keep them engaged, develop a spring curriculum, and lead workshops to prepare them for their roles.

- Quock asked how his campus involvement and advocacy would help in the role. Cardiel highlighted his strong campus presence, connections built through his undergraduate studies, housing, DIRC, and the College of Education, and being someone students approach for support.
- Chair Ahmad congratulated him on joining the program and asked about his plans to increase visibility of resources. Cardiel shared examples, such as collaborating with ASI on events to boost engagement, and suggested accommodating College of Education students, many of whom are commuters or full-time workers, through flexible options like Zoom and targeted outreach.

Jennifer Tran was invited to the podium.

Tran introduced herself as a first-generation, second-year student majoring in Urban Learning in the College of Education. She explained that the college has traditionally focused on graduate and credential programs, leaving undergraduates underrepresented. She hopes to bridge that gap by connecting ASI, students, faculty, and campus resources. She stated that she works as a student assistant, which gives her direct access to the Dean's office to identify issues and share resources. Additionally, she serves as vice president of the Student California Teachers Association and is a member of Titan Future Teachers, utilizing these roles to support and inform future educators. She planned to utilize the director role to raise awareness of resources and foster stronger connections among students, educators, and ASI.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Morales thanked Tran for her presentation and asked if she had any plans to address the lack of undergraduate representation in the college. Tran shared that she had spoken with Mohawk about potential initiatives and planned to hold listening sessions and surveys to better connect ASI with students. She explained that her involvement in various student organizations allowed her to understand diverse student needs and bring them to Student Government. She also highlighted the lack of resources for undergraduates, especially in the Urban Learning program, and emphasized her goal to improve financial and academic support for these students.
- Chair Ahmad acknowledged Tran's many initiatives and asked her to identify one key priority she wanted to focus on and how graduate students could support it. Tran responded that collaborating with graduate students through Club Teach helped her gather insights to support undergraduates. She reiterated the resource gaps undergrad students faced, including limited scholarship opportunities, and stressed the importance of advocating for better support systems.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion.

- Morales commended both candidates for their qualifications and noted his familiarity with Angel from their time in the dorms. He expressed that he was leaning toward Jennifer, highlighting the importance of having undergraduate representation, especially from the Urban Learning program. He emphasized that her perspective would greatly benefit the college and hoped she could work with Chair Ahmad to raise awareness among undergraduate students about ASI and its initiatives. He concluded by praising both candidates as outstanding.
- Quock thanked both candidates for attending and praised their qualifications. He highlighted Angel's experience as a former RA and his work in DIRC, noting his strong advocacy skills and ability to collaborate with different campus groups. He also recognized Tran's strengths and agreed with Chair Morales on the value of bringing an undergraduate perspective to the Board, which has traditionally been represented by graduate students. He expressed interest in how this perspective could influence future Board discussions.

- Chair Ahmad expressed appreciation to both candidates for presenting, noting that they brought diverse perspectives and performed well despite the challenge of presenting before the Board.

The Committee moved to a roll call vote.

Round 1: Roll Call Vote: 2 Cardiel -2 Tran

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion.

- Quock noted that the Board seemed divided and asked Chair Ahmad to share her perspective on working alongside a graduate versus an undergraduate student.
- Chair Ahmad explained that one of her main goals was to increase diversity and inclusion between graduate and undergraduate programs, which she felt were often divided. She expressed a preference for serving with an undergraduate student, as it would bring complementary perspectives and allow for better idea exchange. She emphasized the importance of representing both graduate and undergraduate voices in ASI.
- Camarillo explained that her vote was based on the candidates' broader campus involvement, particularly their experience with the DIRC Center. She emphasized the importance of considering diverse perspectives and experiences beyond the college when selecting representatives.
- Morales agreed that both candidates were highly qualified but highlighted the value of balance and representation. He stressed the importance of having undergraduate voices, especially in this college, to ensure students feel represented and have someone who understands their shared experiences and current challenges. He believed undergraduate representation was crucial for meaningful advocacy and change.

The Committee moved to a second round of a roll call vote.

Round 2: Roll Call Vote: 2 Cardiel - 2 Tran

(Quock-m/Camarillo-s) A motion was made and seconded to return to additional discussion of item 9.B after item 9.C

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion.

- Quock acknowledged that the decision was difficult but encouraged the Board to consider their overall representation and the perspectives currently missing. He emphasized that having an undergraduate representative on the Board would be unique and valuable, noting that it had been a long time since the College of Education had such representation. He believed this perspective would greatly enhance the Board's ability to represent the entire student body.
- Chair Ahmad added that the College of Education has historically faced challenges in filling Board positions, making it especially important to consider the value of an undergraduate perspective. She noted that this perspective would help her collaborate effectively with Jennifer. While acknowledging Cardiel's qualifications, she emphasized the difficulty of connecting with the small urban learning cohort and highlighted Tran's proactive communication and commitment. She believed Jennifer's presence on the Board would be a strong benefit.

The Committee moved to a roll call vote.

- C. Action: Resolution to Appoint the Director for the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics (Ahmad)

The Committee will interview applicants and recommend a candidate to serve as the Director for the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics through May 31, 2026.

GOV 003 25/26 (Camarillo-m/Quock-s) A motion was made and seconded to approve the resolution to appoint the Director of College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics.

Chair Ahmad yielded to Rebecca Hesgard, ASI Director of Student Government, who introduced the candidates.

Shine Aung was invited to the podium.

Aung introduced himself as a third-year student majoring in Biological Science from Myanmar and a first-generation college student with a strong interest in the health sciences. He shared his experience as an ESL tutor, medical clinic and hospital volunteer, and participant in the RSVP program and Dr. Brennan's lab, where he conducted genetics research. He also noted his academic success, including a 3.76 GPA and Dean's List honors, along with his medical certifications. As a Board member, Aung aimed to expand research opportunities for biology students, increase C tutoring sessions to boost grades, and organize team challenges and hackathons to strengthen school spirit and innovation.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

- Morales asked Aung what motivated him to join the ASI Board beyond his goals for the college.

Aung responded that he wanted to bridge the gap between students and ASI by bringing his peers' concerns to the Board.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion. There were no points of discussion.

Isabella Soriano was invited to the podium.

Soriano introduced herself as a fourth-year Biology major with minors in Asian American Studies and Chemistry. She shared her passion for building community, highlighting her experience as an RA, where she helped establish the APISAA community, and her work relaunching the Student Association for Asian American Studies. Her goals included promoting diversity, equity, and inclusion through faculty collaborations and social justice education, supporting the Student Wellness Initiative to boost mental health awareness, and advocating for more research opportunities and recognition of NSM students' contributions. She also expressed interest in continuing initiatives, such as the multilingual synopsis established by a previous Board member.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to questions.

There were no questions.

Chair Ahmad opened the floor to discussion.

- Morales shared that he was leaning toward Isabella as the best fit for the position. He highlighted her strong knowledge of ASI, her positive relationship with her predecessor, and her proven ability to bridge communities and take initiative in starting or reviving organizations. He expressed confidence in her potential and enthusiasm for the direction she could bring to the role.

The Committee moved to a roll call vote.
